North Expands Access to Healthcare Careers

Funding for New Programs

Three new on-campus healthcare programs initiated over the last several years offer advanced skills for Nursing Assistants-Certified (NA-Cs), training in Phlebotomy and preparation for national certification for Anesthesia Technical Services staff. These programs are part of a three-year U.S. Department of Labor Community-Based Job Training Grant, implemented in partnership with the Seattle Community College District and Seattle Vocational Institute.

The Nursing Assistant Academy offers short skill-building modules to help working nursing assistants advance their skillsets through specialized training. These courses help workers meet employers' requirements, earn higher wages and broaden their employment options. Courses include CPR/First Aid for Healthcare Providers, Clinical Hospital Experience for Nursing Assistants, Body Mechanics for the Healthcare Provider, Nurse Delegation Training with Focus on Diabetes, Modified Fundamentals of Care, End of Life Care for the Nursing Assistant, and Mental Health and Dementia Specialty Training for Nursing Assistants.

In addition, the Nursing Assistant Academy has partnered with community-based organizations and local employers to offer a Home Health Aide to NA-C program. In this program, special cohorts of incumbent home health workers advance their careers through intensive training and preparation for the Washington State Nursing Assistant Certification exam. Once certified, program graduates can take on increased responsibility at work, earn higher wages and look toward continued advancement up the healthcare career ladder.

The two-quarter Phlebotomist Certificate program prepares students for an entry-level healthcare career. A student can enter the program without previous education beyond a high school diploma or GED and graduate prepared to work as a technician, collecting and processing blood samples.

The Anesthesia Technical Services program helps prepare anesthesia support staff for the American...
Society of Anesthesia Technologists and Technicians (ASATT) National Certification exam. Offered entirely online using cutting-edge technology, this is the first program reaching out nationwide to standardize anesthesia technical services education.

The I-BEST Advantage

The Phlebotomist Certificate program and some classes in the Nursing Assistant Academy take advantage of Washington state’s groundbreaking I-BEST (Integrated Basic Education and Skills Training) model. I-BEST classes have two instructors in the classroom at the same time—one who focuses on technical skill-building for specific careers and one who provides support for basic English instruction and study skills, with additional class hours for practice each week.

Advances in Nursing Opportunities

Based on a partnership with the Washington State Workforce Coordinating Board, the SEIU 1199 Multi-employer Training Fund and Federal Stimulus funding, NSCC’s nursing program is now offering a new, fully online RN program for 24 incumbent healthcare workers. This is the first online nursing program to be launched in the Puget Sound area.

In 2010 federal stimulus money also helped North train a cohort of 18 students, in partnership with the King County Workforce Development Council, to complete prerequisites for nursing school and earn NA-C certification. This grant supported primarily dislocated workers with barriers to employment.

More than $300K invested in new equipment and space renovations over the past few years has created an updated nursing skills lab—including an intensive care unit, bedside electronic charting capability, and other updated equipment to simulate a current clinical environment.

Funding for Advancement Through Employer Partnerships

Recent grants are also helping North take the concept of career pathways to the workplace. Through these projects, working adults have already moved up the healthcare career ladder to higher wages and more work options, holding onto their jobs while re-training in order to meet the needs of their employers.

Training with Local Hospitals

Several Hospital Employee Education and Training (HEET) grants have helped employees at Northwest Hospital move into the LPN career pathway or get training for promotion to become clinical lab assistants. Strong cooperation among the Service Employees International Union (SEIU), Northwest Hospital personnel and the College allowed employees to take Phlebotomy and Medical Vocabulary on-the-job, as well as nursing prerequisites on-site and on campus. Northwest Hospital staff provided clinical lab work in phlebotomy and human simulation scenarios. With third-year funding, the grant is now supporting a NW Hospital employee cohort through nursing school.

A HEET grant partnership with Swedish Medical Center also trained entry-level employees to become Acute Care Nursing Assistants and Emergency Department Technicians in 2010-2011.

The result of both HEET partnerships has been success in courses, pay raises, high enthusiasm and movement up the career ladder for the participating workers.

Greening Healthcare Practices

Over the past year, North Seattle Community College has been actively engaged in an American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) “green technology in healthcare” grant.

North is working with the grant recipient, Healthcare Career Advancement Program (H-CAP), to serve as the lead college in a multi-regional community college consortium. The aim is to develop national standards and training for “green” processes for hospital environmental service workers, looking at efficiency in water, energy, waste and recycling. A unique concept in the grant is to bring together labor, management and colleges to provide education and training that will prepare incumbent hospital workers for a new job, that of “green” specialist, at their local hospital.

Members of the consortium are NSCC; Prince George’s Community College and Baltimore City Community College in Baltimore; Lehman College, one of the CUNY colleges in New York City; and West Los Angeles Community College in Los Angeles.

North’s role has been to convene the consortium to develop a single curriculum for all the colleges. That meeting took place last February. As a result, a five-credit course/certificate was piloted at NSCC during the late spring and early summer of 2011.

Jane Reis, North faculty member, serves both as the curriculum developer and principal instructor. Twenty-three students/hospital environmental service employees from Northwest Hospital and Swedish Hospital completed the course. Our national partners at Baltimore, New York City and Los Angeles colleges kicked off their programs last fall.

A $250,00 one-year follow-up grant, recently awarded to North, will expand the green technology in healthcare program to include green practices training for both nutrition services and facilities workers at both Northwest Hospital and Swedish Medical Center.

Training As Medical Assistants for Incumbent Workers

Skill-Up Washington has been partnering with NSCC to provide a unique educational opportunity for working adults in the Seattle/King County area. The outcome: ten students graduated last June with certificates in Medical Assisting as part of a specially funded grant project based on North’s established Medical Assistant program.

The grant program used a cohort model with intensive case management, a mix of online coursework and hands-on labs, and a compressed curriculum to accommodate students’ schedules. NSCC worked with Group Health Cooperative, Planned Parenthood of the Great Northwest and Swedish Physicians to recruit incumbent healthcare workers into the program. Many of the students had spent years working as receptionists or in call centers and had a real desire to climb the healthcare career ladder. This program has allowed them to do just that. North celebrates and praises the students, instructors and case managers whose hard work and dedication led to this very positive result.

A second round of Medical Assistant training with Skill-Up Washington and the King County Workforce Development Council began last fall, preparing a cohort of 25 low-income Seattle residents to access living wage jobs. The program provides case management and tuition supports for all participants and is offered in partnership with Seattle Vocational Institute.

Signs of North’s Success

North’s initiative to develop clear career pathways is reflective of our commitment to our core themes: Advancing Student Success, Excelling in Teaching and Learning, and Building Community. This commitment has attracted significant public and private investment in our programs and has earned the College a reputation nationwide for creating partnerships effective in helping non-traditional students become active partners in advancing their own education.

For more information about NSCC health and medical programs, please contact Health and Human Services at (206) 934-3790, nschhs@seattlecolleges.edu.

In summer 2011, North once again hosted a cohort of 16 low-income high school students through Health Careers for Youth, a federally funded partnership that includes the King County Workforce Development Council and the Seattle Youth Employment Program (SYEP). The Seattle area teenagers completed Nursing Assistant-Certified training at North and participated in clinical rotations at long-term care facilities during the months of July and August.

The recipient of a 2009 Governor’s Best Practice Award, Health Careers for Youth prepares graduates for immediate, entry-level healthcare jobs in nursing homes, assisted living facilities, hospitals and home care, and for the Washington State Nursing Assistant certification test. NA-C is often the first step on a career ladder to becoming an LPN.

Jennifer Jack, NA-C instructor, explains: “The project offers young people a course they can complete in the summer to see if a healthcare career is for them. Students learn how to monitor vital signs and client conditions, and, most importantly, assist residents with daily-living tasks at Park West and at Ballard Care and Rehabilitation Center. The teens are very popular with the residents who receive their care, and the student cohort becomes a tight-knit group.”

Mary Dunlap is one of 13 graduates of 2009’s course. Building on her success in Health Careers for Youth, she enrolled at the University of Washington, working toward a nursing degree and the goal of being a pediatric nurse with her own practice. Mary benefited from her several-year involvement with SYEP, which provides year-round academic support and job training for more than 400 underprivileged youth between the ages of 14 and 21.

Last summer’s Health Careers for Youth program helped students take on college-level work and get hands-on experience in the healthcare field. Faculty members were, as always, excited to work with young people who are serious about exploring nursing as a career choice.
Our Mission:
North Seattle Community College is committed to changing lives through education. We achieve our mission by:
Offering comprehensive educational opportunities
Creating a highly supportive learning environment
Engaging in effective and enduring partnerships

From President Mark Mitsui...

NSCC is dedicated to giving every student access to training or retraining for employment, preparation for transfer or development of basic skills. As we do this, North's programs are strengthening our local economy by meeting the demands for a well-educated and skilled workforce now and into the future.

For example, NSCC is receiving $1.1 million through Air Washington, expanding our electronics program to meet the state's growing aerospace workforce needs. North already partners with the FAA, where degree program graduates are considered for FAA internships/hiring for air traffic control jobs.

Entrepreneurs in the community who need help starting or growing their businesses can now get free consultation and access to business/marketing software at North's Entrepreneur Success Center every Thursday evening on campus. For more information, contact David. Eberhardt@seattlecolleges.edu. North also offers dynamic customized training programs to business and industry — working currently with Vaupell, Virginia Mason, Group Health and Planned Parenthood.

The newly opened and very busy Opportunity Center for Employment and Education (OCE&E) is offering financial literacy workshops for the community, including free tax preparation workshops. Pathway to Careers — a partnership between Seattle Community Colleges, the City of Seattle, and various business and service organizations — is building educational pathways to middle class jobs for youth and low-income working adults. An upcoming one-day forum at the OCE&E will bring together local leaders to dialogue on next steps.

Through the work of our sustainability coordinator and student volunteers, NSCC was recently awarded a 29% tax credit on its stormwater tax bill for 2012 and succeeding years (approximately $27,000/year). North also received a STARS Bronze Rating for sustainability achievements from the Association for the Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education.

Our recent Veterans Fair provided student vets and their families with a variety of resources — veteran organizations, housing assistance, financial workshops, counseling, disability claims, and employment and educational opportunities.

Six Washington community colleges received Rethinking Pre-college Math grants in March 2010, funded by the Gates Foundation. North ranks 1st (and 2nd among all state CTCs) in pre-college courses passed/student.

In the humanities area, Molly Tenebaum, English faculty member, has published her latest book of poetry. Also, Margot Boyer, English, and Karen Stuhldreher, Gender and Women Studies, gave a presentation at the Washington Community College Humanities Association conference about their coordinated studies program. English faculty Tracy Heinlein is current WCCHA president.

Two NSCC students studying abroad in Spain this winter received Benjamin A. Gilman International Scholarships, a congressionally funded program sponsored by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs at the State Department. We're also very proud that our Undergraduate Research students have distinguished themselves — with seven NSCC student-scientists presenting posters on their research findings at the prestigious AAAS meeting at Vancouver in February.

In early March I’m traveling to Japan with the Japanese American Leadership Delegation. I look forward to helping identify potential partnerships with our local community.
Dear Friends:

I want to start by giving a big THANK YOU to all those who support North Seattle Community College students through the Education Fund. Thanks to the 240 individual donors and 54 organizations who, in 2010-2011, collectively gave over $1,023,832 to keep our mission alive and strong. This included college faculty and staff (both active and retired), graduates and many community members who support the mission of North. Thanks also to our corporate and foundation donors for giving generously in times of tight budgets. And thanks to the many students, faculty and staff who volunteered for Ed Fund events.

Because of these supporters, over $136,000 was awarded in scholarships in 2010-2011, and 170 students received emergency assistance. But it doesn't stop there. The Ed Fund made additional grants totaling $408,640 to the College for program support, equipment and faculty development. Some of the purchases included emergency radios for the security department, DVDs for the language lab, touch screens for the new Opportunity Center for Employment and Education, membership licenses, and IT equipment.

Four hundred twenty-six thousand dollars from a Gates Foundation grant purchased an Electro-Mechanical Training System, plus equipment add-ons and software to support a power lab used both by the engineering students in the Eastern Washington University BSEE program (which has classes for juniors and seniors on our campus) and by NSCC students in the Industrial Power and Control program.

We started the 2010 academic year with a new president for the College, Mark Mitsui. After spending just a little time with him, it was obvious to me that he is committed to student success. He weaves the importance of students completing their studies into his conversations. He believes the Ed Fund is critical to North’s students and has the data to confirm that students receiving some form of financial assistance have a much higher course completion rate and graduation rate than those who don’t. Under Mark, North developed three core themes: Excelling in Teaching and Learning, Advancing Student Success and Building Community. The Ed Fund plays a vital role in each of these themes by raising the funds that support the projects that are outside the College’s basic operating budget.

I've been a member of the board of the directors for six years and am looking forward to being the chair for two years. As a former student, I have a great passion for North. I appreciate the role community colleges play in higher education and believe strongly in North’s mission of “changing lives through education.”

Again, thank you for your generosity. You didn’t let the decreasing funding from the state become a reason or an excuse to deny our students the opportunity to be successful. Your thoughtfulness will mark their lives forever!

Sincerely,

D. Michael Ballard
Plan to attend the 2012 Passport to Success dinner on April 28.

Join the Alumni Association

Whether you’ve taken one class or many classes at North Seattle Community College, we would like to welcome you into our Alumni Association. You join a prestigious network of people – a richly diverse and global community with a shared experience and pride in the College.

As an alumnus/a, you will always be a vital member of our NSCC family – whether you attend an event at North, network with fellow students or graduates in your field, help recruit future students, serve as a mentor, give a gift to North’s Education Fund, or all of the above.

We hope that you will update the College whenever your contact information changes, so that you can receive the latest NSCC updates including news, campus activities and developments in your field.

Maybe you or someone you know has been helped by an educational institution. Maybe you’re an active volunteer or believer in the transformational power of gaining a college degree or career training, or perhaps you want to leave a gift in memory of a loved one or for a specific purpose.

Non-profit organizations like the NSCC Education Fund enhance our community through making higher education accessible to those seeking to improve themselves through learning. Which Education Fund cause touches your heart?

A planned gift to the Education Fund is an opportunity to improve life in our community for years to come. The late Phyllis Alexandria Mayo (1945-2009) was one such person who believed mightily in the mission of the NSCC Education Fund. She came to know our students and the incredible power of success that a college education imparts to those seeking knowledge. Phyllis was first an early board member of the NSCC Foundation and then became a board member of its fundraising successor, the NSCC Education Fund.

Upon Phyllis’s death in November 2009, the Education Fund learned that she had remembered the Fund in her estate plans. Phyllis had arranged for the Education Fund to be the beneficiary of her retirement plan. Over time, the planned gift Phyllis left to the Education Fund will grow to nearly $100,000, enough to establish a permanently endowed fund in her memory, providing scholarships each year.

If you’d like to learn how a planned gift can benefit the Education Fund, please contact Anne Zacovic at (206) 934-5661.

Plan to attend the 2012 Passport to Success dinner on April 28.

Planning a Gift to the Ed Fund?

The Ed Fund welcomes gifts in many forms.

- You can write a check, make a credit card donation, or offer cash. It’s simple and easy to make a donation, and you can give online.
- Donate appreciated property (stock, bonds or real estate), eliminate capital gains taxes, and receive a donation for the fair market value.
- Make a bequest. You can leave a percentage of your estate or make a bequest of money or property in your will. It’s easy – just insert a few simple sentences, such as “I give $10,000 to the Education Fund at North Seattle Community College.” Your bequest is revocable – you can always change your mind at any time – and it’s tax-smart.

You can dedicate your bequest for a specific purpose, give it in honor of an individual or create an endowment.

- An assortment of giving options will provide you with income, now or in the future, and with tax benefits that could reduce your current taxes and/or estate taxes. Consult your tax professional for advice.

Please don’t hesitate to contact the Ed Fund if you have ideas that would benefit our family of friends or if would like to be actively involved in some of its exciting activities. You’ll find North alumni throughout Seattle, across the country, around the world and certainly on the Internet, and we need you – you are the reason we are here!
In addition to scholarships, donations to the Education Fund provide: training and professional development for faculty and staff; student support and emergency assistance; support for guest speakers and events on campus; instructional equipment for classrooms and teaching labs.

2011 – North’s 40th Anniversary of Student Success

April 29, 2011, North Seattle Community College’s ninth annual dinner/auction fundraiser, “Passport to Success,” celebrated the College’s 40th birthday, with the help of boosters, corporations and friends. Nearly 200 attendees enjoyed a great meal of Northwest fusion cuisine, an outstanding “dessert dash,” and a live auction. There were vacation trips, jewelry, dinners at favorite local restaurants, get-a-way weekends, and much more to bid on!

Dinner guest Gail Wham praised the proceedings: “The student speakers were inspirational! I was touched by their determination, and how they are experiencing that education is the answer.”

The event netted over $110,000, which refilled the “bank” for 2011-2012 scholarships and other programs that support student success. We thank the many individuals on campus who worked so hard on this event – especially our Education Fund scholarship recipients and our international students who set-up, cleaned-up, served the meal and helped behind the scenes, and the NSCC faculty and staff, who once again volunteered to help wherever they could. It truly takes an entire college to make this event a success!

We also thank our generous sponsors: American Financial Solutions, Rolex Watch USA, Ben Bridge Jewelers, Boeing, GM Nameplate, Schacht Aslani Architects, Buckley Investments, Hotel Nexus, and UW Medicine Northwest Hospital and Medical Center.

Leaving your Legacy: Remember the NSCC Education Fund in your will and estate plans.
